The next set of cards that follows the joker is known as the regular card deck. The regular card deck has 54 cards. The joker in this set of cards is the wild card. There are no black and red cards. Instead, the color of the cards are split into blue, red, and green cards, with blue being the odd-numbered cards, red the even numbered cards, and green the joker. This deck has 56 cards in it. Conventions The joker card may be drawn from the card deck by matching the joker card with the joker face on the joker card. (In some versions, the joker card may be played, but the game is not considered to be over until it is played and the card is returned to the deck.) The game may be won by landing on the joker, unless the player has a card with the same color and value as the joker, in which case it is lost. The joker card may be matched, to gain the highest-valued card in a scoring category. For example, if all the players are playing for point values, a player may match the joker to the highest-value card in their hand, and score 1 point for that card. The joker card may be played as a "wild card", thus gaining any color card matching the card's value. This is useful to draw out a higher-valued card. The "wild" joker card may be played from the hand or from the deck, depending on the version of the game. The joker card may be played by any player, to draw a joker card if none are left in the hand. Trading cards All three UNO types feature a trading card type game where the player is able to trade with a partner. In the case of the joker card, cards of different colors are exchanged for this "trading card". However, the trading card only features on the joker card. In the case of "Regular" cards, there are two different trading card sets that can be used. One trading set is red-blue, and the other is blue-red. Both the red and the blue card face is used, so there is a total of 4 possible trading sets. The red-blue trading set uses the red face on the top and bottom cards, and the blue face on the card in the middle. The blue 4bc0debe42
